E. W. Cole levele szüleihez (Cole, 1861, pp. 54–58)

Letter to Mother and Father, Melbourne Jan 25, 1861 – from Diary of 1860

Melbourne, Jan 25th 1861

Dear Mother and Father,

I received a letter from you yesterday Dated November and was most happy to hear that you was [sic] all well. John and myself are quite well I am not a doing anything in town at present but I live in hope.

Hope springs Eternal in the human breast

Man never is but always to be blest.

I send you a Paper with the proposed scale [sic] of charges for Emigration. it is not the law yet but I think soon will be and then I will see what I can do. You will see by the Paper that there is a plenty of Employment for females and good wages but there is not much employment for men. I am sorry that you did not get the ten pounds from Mrs Rule. I hear that she is a coming out to this Country. I cannot send you Uncle John's address as it is at Castlemaine. I will send it next mail. I think that perhaps there will be a large Emigration to this Country as they talk of sending home some good speakers to lecture on its resources and capabilities. We have had splendid weather for many months now. So much news and now I must beg to make a few remarks upon the subject matter of most of your letters. You have frequently impressed upon me that the reason that I do not prosper in my undertakings is because (to use your own words) that I do not fear the Lord. I very much question if fearing the Lord would put much money into a man's pocket. It is and always was my nature and disposition to be restless unsettled and continually attempting some new thing. I am immensely speculative. I fancy that a certain thing will pay and I cannot rest until I have tried it. I strain every nerve and raise every farthing I can to put into it. If it answers I make money and if it fails I lose everything. You are probably unaware of the number and variety of trades and callings that I have followed in this country within the last eight years and as it might be amusing if not interesting to you I will give you a list of them.

*First I started as a Miner
2 as Land Speculator
3 as Builder
4 as House Land and Commission agent
5 as a Glass Melter
6 as a County Court Baliff
7 as a Wood Splitter
8 as Cider Beer Wine and Lemonade Manufacturer
9 as Contractor for Lighting the Tower
10 as a Sausage Maker and Pork Butcher
11 as Photographer
12 as Restaurant keeper
13 as Manufacturer of Jam's Sauces
14 as Broker
15 as Fencer and Rough Carpenter
16 as Manufacturer of Mining Machinery
17 as Speculator in mining Shares and reefing.*

I have followed many other callings for a short time. I am very thankful to you for causing me to make this enumeration. I had no idea that I had followed so many trades before now and I certainly think that I have followed to [sic] many to pay. As the phrase goes a new light begins to break in on me in the multiplicity of my trades is the secret of my failure. If I had commenced at one trade eight years ago and kept at it and made myself proficient in it instead of running from one thing to another I might now be one of the richest men in this country and the wonder to me as upon a review of the whole affair how I have saved what I have not having seriously thought of it before. I have only just arrived at the conclusion that a man starting a business with which he is little acquainted has no chance of competing with one that know his business well. At any rate for a time he must what they call buy his learning. He must be expert at it and know it 's secrets. About the time that I have generally bought my learning all my money is gone and I am unable to go ahead.

You say I do not prosper because I do not read the Bible.

That may be so.

But by parity of reasoning it would follow that a person reading it would prosper. Eleven years ago you and I stood upon a certain spot in England on a total equality [sic] as far as money was concerned. Between that time and this a certain number of happy and unhappy days for both of us have intervened. You have worked every day and are not worth in property more than ten pounds. I have worked upon the average not more than one day in three and I have now an interest in a property worth 800 pounds and bringing me in eighty pounds per annum. Far, far be it from me to wish to cast any reflection upon your poverty. It should not be so if I could realise upon my property without a great sacrifice and I am in hopes it will soon be different. Again in this City and in fact in every City of the Civilised world there is a class of men that do not read the Bible - a most Heartless Dishonest Lying Cheating Lazy and Dispicable [sic] race of men and yet in proportion to their number they have by far a greater Amount of Wealth than any People in the world. Look around you and you see many that do not read the Bible Prosper and many that read it do not Prosper. True a great Drunkard or Gambler may read the Bible be convinced that he is wrong and he may reform and prosper but if he left it off without reading the Bible he would prosper all the same. It was not reading the Bible that made him prosper but the leaving off spending his money and wasting his time. A man might do that and not have a spark of religion in him.

Once more and finally if I enter into a trade with which I am little acquainted with a small [and perhaps borrowed] capital in a place where there is a brisk competition carried on by men well versed in it and redundant of Capital it is evident to an intelligent man if he puts it to the thought that whether [sic] I read the Bible or no I shall fail.

From your affectionate son.

E W Cole

Australia and its Neighbours.

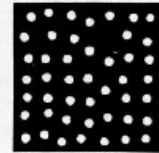

Each Dot represents a Million of Population.

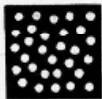

India proper is about half the size of Australia, contains 300 millions of people, who are still increasing, and are only 14 days' steaming from Australia.

China proper is about half the size of Australia, contains 400 millions of people, who are still increasing, and are only 14 days' steaming from Australia.

Japan is about one-eighteenth the size of Australia, and contains 46 millions of people, who are still increasing, and are only 16 days' steaming from Australia.

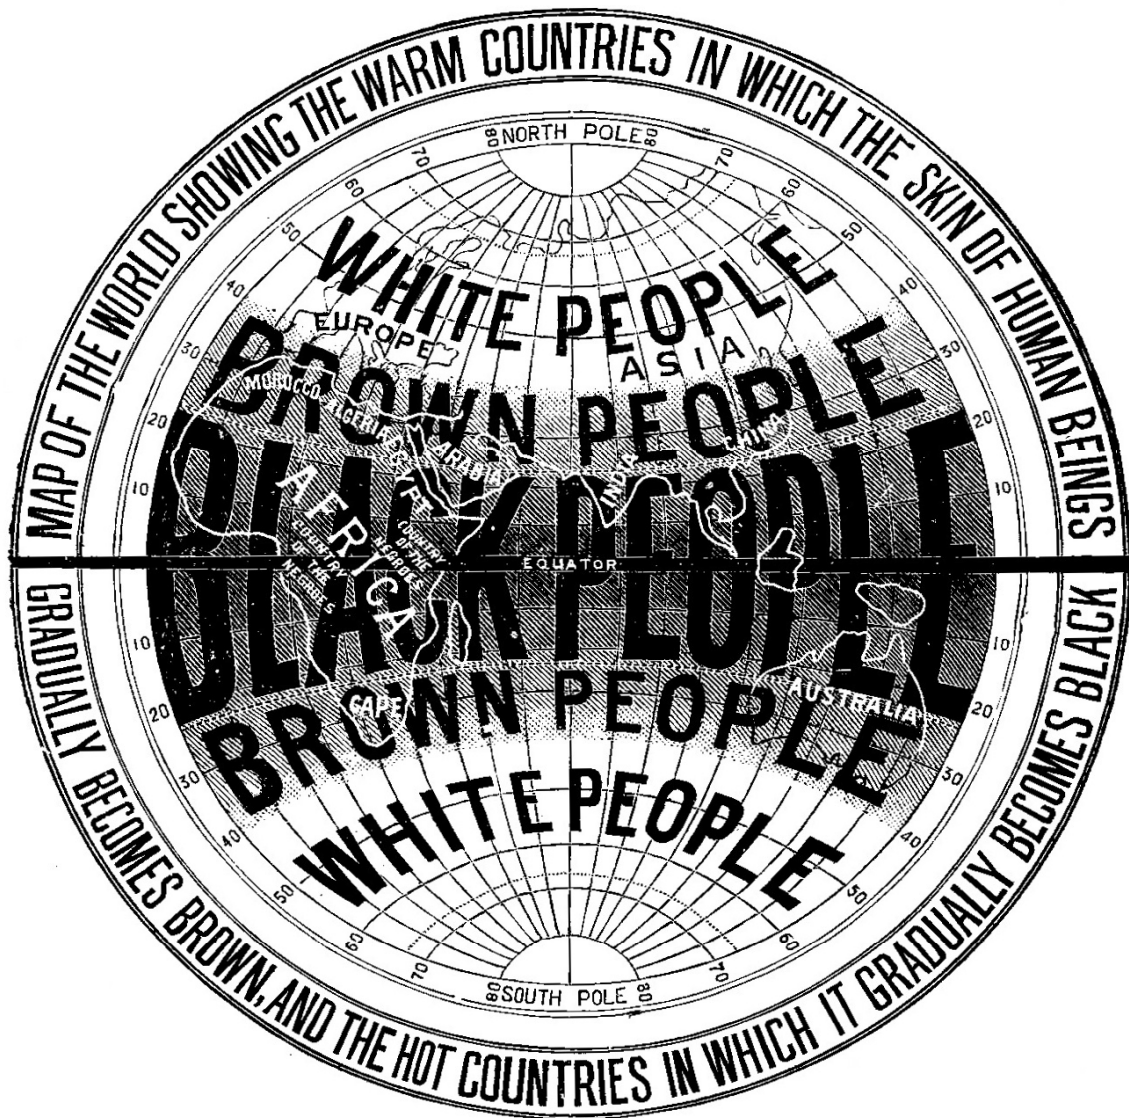

Java is about one-sixtieth the size of Australia, contains 30 millions of people, who are still increasing, and are only 3 or 4 days' steaming from our unoccupied tropical Australia.

Australia, about the same area as India and China combined, contains only 4 millions of people.

Cole térképe a The Cause of Color in Mankind című pamflethez (Cole, 1903)

As shown in the above diagram, the whole of Africa, called the "Darkest Continent," lies in the tropics or semi-tropics. In the centre, where it is the hottest place on earth, the people are black. In the extreme north and south of the continent, where it is cooler, the people are brown, except in case of immigrants. Australia lies in the tropics and semi-tropics, and, consequently, all her people must become more or less coloured. Therefore, a permanent White Australia is a physical impossibility.
