Dear Janos Vincze:

In recognition of your participation in this year's ACM-ICPC, the Association for Computing Machinery (ACM) has extended an ACM Student Membership to you for one year at no cost!

You will find the latest information on ACM publications, SIG activities, chapters, online books and courses, conferences and much more by browsing our website at <http://www.acm.org>.

Your membership also includes a free email forwarding address "@acm.org". Email sent to: jvincze@acm.org will be forwarded to janos.vincze@unideb.hu.

If your real email address should change, you can update your email address online or by contacting Member Services. Email forwarding is protected, through a partnership with Postini, from junk mail and viruses. No further action is required on your part.

We strongly encourage you to create your free ACM Web Account (if you haven't already). To create your ACM Web Account, simply go to <https://campus.acm.org/public/accounts/create.cfm>. Creating your free web account is essential in order to access many areas of the ACM website.

Should you have any questions about your membership or any of ACMs products and services, please do not hesitate to contact ACM Member Services, and once again, welcome to ACM!

Regards,
ACM Member Services Department
