Conceptional processes, as assets of the state security in the late Kádár-era –
Anathomy of two criminal processes

The Hungarian social and historical sciences are awakened according to the 60th anniversary of the revolution in 1956. The previous political system has been already described in several studies, most of these focus just on a part of the Hungarian communism: the Rákosi-era and the revenge after the affairs of 1956.

The Kádár-era is more complex and controversial than the 1950's in several fields. In my essay I am going to present a part of the working of the state security services in the 1980's. I wish to demonstrate the principles, mechanisms, assets and contacts of the services through the criminal processes of two young companies from the towns called Szeged and Veszprém. Both investigations, that involved two secret actions as well, were closed with writs. The judgement was prison sentence for both young companies. In addition I try to prove through presenting the controversaries during the court part, if one needs to find conceptional processes, it is useless to go back to the 1950's, there are still several processes in the 1980's as well to be dicovered.
