Dear Mr. Ferenc Balázs Farkas,

Welcome to the International Society for Infectious Diseases (ISID)

We're pleased that you've decided to join over 90,000 colleagues from around the world working to create and share the knowledge necessary to prevent, investigate, and manage infectious diseases, when and where it matters most.

To make the most of your membership look for regular ISID newsletters in your inbox with the latest updates on events, activities and programs including:

- The International Journal of Infectious Diseases, the Society's peer-reviewed, open access publication
- ProMED, our infectious disease surveillance network providing free, up-to-date, reliable email reports on outbreaks from around the world
- A Guide to Infection Control in the Healthcare Setting, the Society's practical handbook on the management of nosocomial infections and the development of hospital-based infection control programs
- Grants and Fellowships - professional development opportunities and funding for original scientific research
- International Congress on Infectious Diseases – a notable meeting held biennially in different world regions
- International Meeting on Emerging Diseases & Surveillance – for those whose interests embody the “One Health” model of emerging diseases

Membership in the Society is free but our ability to advance our mission, provide free tools and resources, and maintain our focus on building the capacity of practitioners and policy makers across the globe is dependent on the generosity of our members and donors. Please support the work of the Society – make your donation today at [\[http://www.isid.org/donate/\]](http://www.isid.org/donate/).

Best regards,

Amy Galblum
