Academic year

The Academic year at Saint-Petersburg University lasts for 10 months and is divided into 2 semesters: fall semester (FS) and spring semester (SS). The fall semester lasts from September 1st to January 31st, with January as the examination period, and spring semester lasts from February 11th to June 30th, with June as the examination period.

Workload - credit system and academic hours

For completing the courses at Saint-Petersburg University students are given credits according to the ECTS (European Credit Transfer System). To clarify the workload there is also information about the length of the taken course in academic hours in the Transcript.

Grading system

Grades for examinations are awarded according to the qualitative scale from excellent (the highest) to fail (the lowest) with satisfactory as the minimum passing grade. The grades are awarded according to the following criteria:

Excellent - "5"	An excellent performance showing a good command in the subject
Good - "4"	A performance above average but with some shortcomings
Satisfactory - "3"	An average performance that meets the minimum standard
Fail - "2"	A bad performance that doesn't meet the minimum standard

Also some courses are evaluated using a passed \ failed grade according to the following criteria:

Passed	The record confirms that studying of the discipline is completed, necessary tests passed, but assigning a grade is not required according to the curriculum
Failed	A performance below the minimum standard
